

Folio 95: "In 1527, on the eleventh of October... at the fourth hour in the morning, this comet was seen for five quarters of an hour in Westerreich, then disappeared again. It was very long and yellow-red, similar to a mingled colour of blood. At the front the head like a bent arm, as if it had a sword in its hand and wanted to strike. And at the point of the sword there were three big stars and from the stars sprang a cloud-coloured stream, which was longer than the comet's tail, as it is painted here."
